ARE YOU SURE YOU'RE UP FOR THIS?

What I have to share with you will be short, sweet, and to the point. I'm not going to sugarcoat and tell you all the things you want to hear; quite the contrary, I'm going to get under your skin and tell you exactly how it is.

I didn't write this report with your feelings in mind. Therefore, I'm not going to "tread softly" or "walk on eggshells" to avoid hurting them (despite the fact that your current condition might seem to warrant this approach).

What that being said, if you're still at the point in your breakup where you're feeling sorry for yourself and in need of a shoulder to cry on then this report is not for you.

However, if you're fed up with what's going on in your relationship (or what's left of it) and you're ready to do something about it, then I'll make you a deal.

That is: I'll tell you the stone-cold truth about your breakup in a way that no one else will, either because they don't know how, or worse still, they don't have the "balls" to do so.

Why the need for such a raw approach? To get you to snap out of it and get you back on track to dealing with the obstacle at hand.

With that out of the way, I'll proceed to give you some solid, eye-opening advice that goes a long way in getting you what you want. I'm willing to do this for you but only on one condition:

... That you read through this report from beginning to end with an open mind.

Now this isn't some rehashed theory that I stumbled across and then just decided to write about. No. What I write here is born out first-hand experiences that have taken place over the past 16 years of my own life.

Over these past 16 years I've had the pleasure (and pain) of getting into and getting over some very serious relationships.

I have been where you are at this very moment and I have beaten the odds of getting a girl back on more than one occasion.

I've also made just about every relationship mistake there is to make such as getting into the wrong ones, screwing up the right ones, and failing to correct the broken ones.

Now you might be wondering to yourself, "So what? What makes you so special and what gives you the right to tell me what you're telling me?"

That's a good question and the answer is simple.

It's true; I'm not the only person in the world who's been in and out of relationships.

However, throughout this "journey" of mine I've developed a very a keen eye for predicting the chances of relationships working out from their beginnings until their very ends and reunions.

And that's because this is a topic that has fascinated me from the very beginning. It's a topic that I continue to aggressively study and teach to this very day, never forgetting to ask along the way the who, what, why's, and how's that make relationships tick and couples "stick".

Now a final note before we get started: what you choose to do with the information I share with you today is completely up to you.

The sad fact of the matter is that most people will read through it, get a little excited, and then not follow through with it.

That's because they live in a dream world and believe that if they keep doing what they're doing, their girlfriends will change their minds and decide to come back to them one day.

That's bullshit - that is a passive loser's mentality.

Don't be one of them. Be strong enough to face the reality of your situation and be willing to get your hands dirty.

This is your life we're talking about, it's not some game. If you lose you can't just hit the restart button and get a second chance.

The consequences of your actions (or inactions) are permanent. So play hard and play to win.

Are you still with me? Good... now let's get to it.

THE BIG FAT LIES THAT KEEP YOU BROKEN UP

It was about time someone stepped up to the plate and finally laid to rest the truth about men, women, and the dreaded breakup that most relationships end up going through.

Here's the deal: as far as I'm concerned there's never been a time where more men end up holding the short end of the stick in their relationships all the while wondering what the hell went wrong.

And through all this men have been led to believe certain myths that take their relationships, rip them apart, and then destroy any and all chances of them repairing them.

It's time to stop the insanity and start clearing through the "fog" that's gotten so thick you can cut through it with a knife.

So without further stalling, here's the 3 biggest lies that hold you back from getting with your girl...

BIG FAT LIE #1:

"She's the love of my life, I now realize that we are truly meant to be together and would give anything for a second chance"

Guess what? That's not you talking. That's your rejected ego talking. Right now you're a living, breathing, walking/talking reject.

IMPORTANT: I want you to understand that what I'm doing here is deliberately trying to offend you. Why? For two simple reasons:

1. Because I'm trying to shake you up a bit and get you to snap out of your destructive line of thinking. I want to drastically shift your outlook on your situation so that you can be more receptive to everything I have to say from here on in.
2. Because I'm trying to get rid of the guys that are not qualified to read this report. Like a mentioned before, most guys live in a dream world and can't handle the truth. To them I say, "Good luck and good riddance. There's nothing here for you..."

But if you've stuck with me so far and what I say to you "clicks", I promise to open up the doors to whole new world of possibilities that exist between you and your ex.

Think about it for a second. Go back a year into your relationship or even 6 months ago. Did you feel the same way about this girl? Take some time to really think about this.

Now don't get me wrong...

There's no doubt in my mind that you love her, it's that neither you nor I know exactly how much at this point because you're hurting big time and that pain is causing you to think irrationally.

If there's any piece of advice I can give you right now, no matter how bad you don't want to hear it, it's this: put this report down and take a few days to really think about the above statement.

Because if you're guilty of thinking it then I want you to spend the next few days going back through your relationship in your head and weigh its pro's and cons.

Is this girl really all you're making her out to be or is it your inner voice of rejection talking here? Don't brush over this - DO IT...I mean it.

Back already? Good, let's press on...

Now let me tell you what's really going on in your head. Right now you are glorifying your relationship with this girl.

You're thinking of all the good times you've had together and you're probably thinking that she's "the one" and you want to spend the rest of your life with her.

How do I know? Because I've been in this exact same spot on numerous occasions and it never ceases to amaze me that this thinking prevails every single time.

But what's really happening here? Answer: a logical reaction to rejection.

And since I'm not in the middle of a breakup right now I can say this with ease and complete confidence.

However, getting you to believe it (let alone digesting and internalizing it) is a different matter altogether.

Nonetheless, let me help you out a bit. Rejection is simply another way of describing something we can't have. And naturally, you, me, and everybody else always wants what they can't have.

It becomes a fantasy not unlike fame or wealth or anything of the sort.

But what's the problem with this line of thinking? When we fantasize about something we blow the benefits of having it way out of proportion and if we're lucky (or unlucky) enough to get it, reality quickly sinks in.

It is for this reason that most couples that do end up back together after a breakup don't stay together very long.

Again, it's because the extraordinary fantasy has turned into an ordinary reality.

What you need to do is turn this extraordinary fantasy into an extraordinary reality even before you have accomplished your goal.

Much easier said than done, I know, but going back and weighing the positives and negatives of your relationship is the "trick".

But why is this so important (perhaps the most important factor that determines whether you'll get her back or not)?

Because if you continue to live in a fantasy all of your actions will be dictated by desperation and despair. Things such as begging and pleading, constantly saying you're sorry, and everything else that's completely out of character and reeks of need (i.e. things that push her further away).

Understand that people come and go in our lives. If this relationship doesn't work out there will be a next one that will possibly make this one look pale in comparison in terms of love, connection, and so forth.

In other words, I don't believe that everybody has just one single person that they're meant to be with.

However, that's not to say that you shouldn't try. Not in the least.

Why?

Because finding one of those "special" people is increasingly rare, so when you do find one you should try your best to hold on to them.

However, you should try with a mindset based on reality - not fantasy!

BIG FAT LIE #2:

"If I remain friends with her I can show her that I've changed and over time she'll want to get back together with me"

Nothing could be further from the truth and here's why.

If you remain friends with your ex, what message are you really sending her? That the current state you're in is perfectly acceptable and that you're fine with it. Is that what you really want?

I didn't think so. What you truly want is to be together as a couple...not friends, that is unless you've given up on the relationship and are willing to let her go altogether.

Remaining friends with a girl after she breaks up with you is like digging your own grave.

In 9 out of 10 cases (and that's an understatement) what will ultimately end up happening is that she'll move on and leave you hanging every step of the way.

The only thing this does is gets your hopes up while smothering any guilt she feels for making your life a living hell. Don't do it. Step away and lay down your rules. Let her know that it's all or nothing.

It takes guts to do something so contradictory to logic such as this, but trust me when I tell you that if you have any chances of making amends in your relationship, it's by taking a step back - not forward. You have to follow what I've termed the "reactive/proactive" approach.

BIG FAT LIE #3:

"Tactics, tricks, techniques will help me get her back"

Do you seriously believe this? Do you seriously want to follow that route? I mean really. Because if you do I'll make it even easier for you.

Come to think of it, how much money would you be willing to pay me if I could tell you that I could get her to come back to you in less than 3 seconds? Would you be interested?

I bet you would, because it wouldn't take you no 2 days, let alone 21 days, and it certainly won't require 4 steps or whatever bullshit promises you might have been exposed to.

Are you ready for it? Here it is...Walk over to her house, knock on her door and when she answers put a gun to her head and tell her that if she doesn't come back to you, you'll blow her head off...you know what will happen?

BAM! - she'll instantly give in to you - until you get arrested and spend the next 10 to 15 years behind bars.

My point?

When it comes to getting a girl back, it's not about tricks, tactics, and techniques...it's a strategy, a well thought, well-planned one at that.

A strategy that requires you to make significant changes in your thinking and approach to your situation.

Without these changes all the tips, tactics, and tricks in the world won't do you any good.

There's so much bullshit floating around these days when it comes to relationship repair (specifically men's relationship repair) that it makes me sick. Who are they trying to kid? You can't just wave a magic wand or say a few words and expect her to come back.

And you definitely can't put a timeline on this happening either. That's like saying every relationship is the same and what works with one will work with the other...and (drum roll please) it will happen in a specific amount of time!

Give me a break. Sure, relationships share many common characteristics. After all, they are made up of people; however, do you honestly believe that your relationship is exactly the same as everyone else's? Didn't think so.

The lesson to be learned here...don't buy into the hype - it will do more bad than good, trust me.

LET'S WRAP IT UP

Now we've just scratched the surface of the things it takes to put an effective strategy into place to get your girlfriend back. To be honest, there's a lot more to it, that's why I'm going to be checking in on you very soon to see how you're coming along.

And while the few key pieces of advice might seem to be overly simplistic, trust me when I tell you that they are the paramount stepping stones to getting what you want. I say this from experience.

Do not be fooled by their simplicity. All effective things in life are simple, not just relationship repair. It's just too bad that you, me, (and everybody else for that matter) completely miss the boat when it comes to solving problems in our lives because we're too skeptical to believe that that solutions lies in simplicity.

Go back and read over lie #1. That's your starting point, then head over to lie #2.

Knowing and applying just those two principles will get you a long way in getting you what you ultimately want. And always keep lie #3 in mind while you sort things out in your head and start to put your strategy into place.

I'll talk to you soon...
